

The concentration of ownership of radio stations has destroyed programming in that media. I understand that the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) is poised to make a decision that will do the same to the rest of the media, and all American's choice and quality of news and entertainment. I don't want every radio station, newspaper, and television station in my town owned by the same corporate entity without connection to my community and possibly promoting an ideological agenda. I urge the FCC not to weaken the rules that help preserve competition and diversity among the owners of American media.

Sincerely,
Gabriela Goldfarb